Police were called to a suite in an apartment at 1245 Jefferson Avenue around 10:50 a.m. Saturday to check on the well-being of a resident. Once inside they found the body of a 28-year-old woman with stab wounds to her upper body and the body of a 32-year-old man with self-inflicted injuries to his upper body.

resident Ron Ralston Sunday.

Police did not confirm how the man died and did not release the names of the deceased, pending notification of next of kin. Police would say the couple was married, and likely died Friday or Saturday.

Neighbours say the couple moved to a suite on the second floor of the apartment roughly two months ago and kept mostly to themselves.

"He worked on his car a little bit, he had an old clunker," Ralston said of the few times he saw the man. "Just a couple hard-working kids, I think."

Neighbours couldn't confirm reports the couple may have had a young child, and police wouldn't say whether a child was in the suite when the bodies were discovered.

"This is a very tragic incident," said police spokesperson Const. Natalie Aitken.

The case marks Winnipeg's seventh murder of 2012, and the third determined to be domestic-related.

'Toban NDP insiders back Mulcair's leadership

Manitoba roots. New NDP leader worked for the provincial government in 1980s

They didn't start out in Thomas Mulcair's camp, but two prominent Manitoba NDP members do believe Mulcair is the right man for the job.

"I'm glad that the party has selected someone we can all rally behind," said Dave Sauer, president of the Winnipeg Labour Council. "Canadians now have someone they can look at as an alternative to Stephen Harper, and it's not (Liberal interim Leader) Bob Rae."

Sauer, who cast his votes at the leadership conven-tion in Toronto, started off supporting Paul Dewar, MP for Ottawa Centre. Dewar was one of three candidates, including Manitoba's Niki Ashton, to fall off the ballot after the first round of voting.

Political pundits questioned whether Mulcair had the support of labour, but Sauer said many Dewar supporters, as well as those of Peggy Nash, another candidate favoured among trade unionists, went straight to Mulcair's camp.

Sauer said he was impressed by Mulcair's gesture of bringing up all the candidates during Saturday evening's victory speech, including former leader Ed Broadbent, who endorsed Mulcair's last-ballot rival, Brian Topp, and criticized the Quebec MP.

Judy Wasylycia-Leis, a former NDP MP and Winnipeg mayoral candidate, also supported Topp right through to the final ballot.

But Wasylycia-Leis said the party is united behind Mulcair.

"Thomas Mulcair has some pretty deep roots in Manitoba, having worked for the Manitoba government in the 1980s," she said, referring to the time Mulcair was named reviser of the statutes of Manitoba after a Supreme Court of Canada ruling.

"He has a good under-standing of Winnipeg and Manitoba," she said. Though Wasylycia-Leis felt re-energized during the convention, she said a return to federal politics is not on her agenda at this moment.

Three in hospital after Sunday stabbing

Police couldn't say exactly how many suspects are in custody after a fight at a North End home Sunday morning left three women in hospital with knife wounds.

Police were initially called to the home at 45 Polson Ave. at about 8:20 a.m. for reports of a break-and-enter, but officers on arrival found three victims suffering from stab and laceration wounds.

The victims are in hospital in stable condition.

Police spokesperson Const. Natalie Aitken wouldn't release the victims' ages or say how many suspects are in custody while investigators

The NDP hit the reset button this weekend, finally replacing the late Jack Layton with a permanent party leader who will provide shading and definition to Canada's 42nd parliament.

After seven months with the inoffensive caretaker Nicole Turmel leading the Opposition in the Commons, Mulcair brings a far more forceful — Tories say "vicious" - persona to the canvass.

Toulouse gunman's brother hit with preliminary charges

France. Officials launch formal investigation into older brother of Mohamed Merah, who was shot dead by police last week

A Frenchman suspected of helping his brother plot attacks against Jewish schoolchildren and paratroopers has been handed preliminary murder and terrorism charges.

But Abdelkader Merah denied any role in the attacks. Investigators looking into France's worst terror attacks in years believe Merah helped his brother Mohamed prepare the killings, and are investigating whether they were linked to an international network of extremists or worked on their own

Abdelkader's lawyer said he feels like "a scapegoat."

feels like "a scapegoat."

"No one knew anything" about what Mohamed was plotting, lawyer Anne-Sophie Laguens told reporters in Paris on Sunday. She dismissed reports that Abdelkader had praised his brother's attacks.

Allegations

Preliminary charges under French law mean there is strong reason to believe a crime was committed, but allow magistrates more time to investigate.

- Authorities suspect Abdelkader Merah had a role in acquiring his younger brother's arsenal and financing his trips to Afghanistan, Pakistan and the Middle East.
- Mohamed Merah claimed allegiance to al-Qaida and told police he travelled to Afghanistan and Pakistan for training.

"He was never proud of those actions."

Mohamed Merah, 23, claimed responsibility for killing three Jewish school-children, a rabbi and three paratroopers earlier this month. After a 32-hour standoff with police, he died Thursday in a hail of gunfire as he jumped out a window of his apartment in the southern city of Toulouse.

Pope charms during Mexican Mass

Pope Benedict XVI urged Mexicans to wield their faith against drug violence, poverty and other ills, celebrating Sunday Mass before a sea of hushed worshippers beneath a blazing sun in the highlight of his Mexican visit.

Many in the crowd said they were gratified by Benedict's recognition of their country's problems and said they felt reinvigorated in what they described as a daily struggle against criminality, corruption and economic hardship.

Benedict delivered the message to an estimated 350,000 people in the shadow of the Christ the King monument, one of the most important symbols of Mexican Christianity, which recalls the 1920s Roman Catholic uprising against the anti-clerical laws that forbade public worship services such as the one Benedict celebrated.

Reaction

Many Mexicans said they were surprised by the warmth of Benedict, whose image was more reserved and academic than the popular John Paul II.

New depths. James Cameron dives to deepest spot on Earth

Hollywood icon James Cameron has completed his journey to Earth's deepest point.

The Canadian director of Titanic, Avatar and other films used a specially designed submarine to dive nearly 11 kilometres. He spent time exploring and filming the Mariana Trench, about 320 kilometres southwest of the Pacific island of Guam, according to members of the National Geographic expedition.

Cameron returned to the surface of the Pacific Ocean on Monday morning local time, Sunday evening on the U.S. East Coast, according to Stephanie Montgomery of the National Geographic Society.

Risk

10.9

One of the risks of a dive so deep is extreme water pressure. At 10.9 kilometres below the surface, the pressure is the equivalent of three SUVs sitting on your toe.

He spent a little more than three hours under water after reaching a depth of 10,898 metres before he began his return to the surface, according to information provided by the expedition team.

He had planned to spend up to six hours on the sea floor.

Unfortunately (and somewhat ironically, given the location), the only place you're likely to see that scene today is outside MTS Centre before a hockey game or a performance of Disney on Ice.

Since the glory days of Portage Avenue, it seems we've raised entire generations of children whose only exposure to our core was an occasional medical appointment or visit to a parent's office. As a result, we now have generations of adults who think of downtown as a scary foreign land without enough parking spaces.

So how do we change that perception?

New developments and ad campaigns might help, but one of the simplest and most effective ways would be to Kids and the heart of the city encourage parents to bring their children downtown "Share the sights and more often. Jennifer Lawrence already proved in 2010's Winter's Bone that she could play a girl with strength, wisdom and survival instincts beyond her years. Her performance made her the ideal choice to play Katniss Everdeen, the 16-year-old heroine of The Hunger Games.

'The king of Hogwarts'

Daniel Radcliffe in the Harry Potter movies: He defeats pure evil. What more do you need?

Sure, he starts out as a slightly nerdy, insecure 11-year-old, living a miserable life underneath the stairs at his aunt and uncle's house, unaware of the greatness that dwells within him.

But by the time he hits his teenage years, he's mastering spells and brandishing his wand with purpose and ferocity. He's the king of Hogwarts. Professors admire him. Friends are loyal to him. Chicks dig him. Everyone knows his name — including Lord Voldemort, who could be using his destructive powers in myriad other ways, but instead chooses to focus them on our young hero. And he probably wishes he hadn't.

Harry thinks on his feet and conquers every challenge but still remains a good kid at heart.

The blonde arctic warrior

Saoirse Ronan in Hanna (2011): Ronan re-teams with Joe Wright, who directed her to an Oscar nomination for Atonement, in a role that could not be more different, or more challenging.

She stars as the title character, a blondehaired, blue-eyed, 16-year-old killing machine

Living with her father (Eric Bana) in a rustic cabin in a remote and unforgiving forest just below the Arctic Circle, she learns to hunt, fight and speak in various languages.

Their hand-to-hand combat scenes are quick, intense, visceral — until one day she tells him, "I'm ready."

Upon embarking on the journey that's her destiny, she gets captured by government agents who think she's a shy and sheltered little girl.

But, uh ... they're wrong. Even Cate Blanchett in fierce Prada heels can't stop her.

Teen loner turned detective

Joseph Gordon-Levitt in Brick (2005): I must admit I did not love this movie, a 1930s-style film noir set in a contemporary Southern California high school, when it first came out. I admired how daring it was, but found it too self-conscious ... maybe I should revisit it.

Still, I always loved Gordon-Levitt's performance as Brendan, a teenage loner who's investigating the murder of one of his classmates.

In the tradition of classic Humphrey Bogart characters, Brendan's looks in no way indicate what he's capable of doing as he digs closer to the dangerous truth.

He's slight, fine-featured and messy-haired, perennially dressed in a simple, grey hooded sweat shirt.

But he's quick-witted and he can take a punch (the frequency with which he gets his butt kicked is comical), all of which he's willing to do for this doomed woman he loved.

Hailee Steinfeld in True Grit (2010): Her pigtails and her purity make her adorable, but her strong will and resourcefulness make her a force to be reckoned Steinfeld made her astonishingly self-assured film debut as Mattie Ross, the 19th-century pioneer girl who sets the story's action in motion, and earned an Oscar nomination for best supporting actress in the process.

She was only 13 when she shot the movie, and to say she holds her own with Jeff Bridges, Matt Damon, Josh Brolin and the rest of the cast would be an understatement.

She dominates the Coen brothers' film — carries it, practically — handling the difficult language as well as the physical challenges with equal aplomb.

Rise of Rosamund: from Bond girl to Queen Andromeda

Wrath of the Titans.

Veteran actress has maintained a career that veers between literary works and muscular pulp fictions

CHRIS ALEXANDER

Critics may have crushed Louis Letterier's massivebudgeted revisit of early '80s gods and monsters in Clash of the Titans, but cinema goers ensured that it cut through the box office like the sword of Perseus across Medusa's neck.

Still, when it came to dipping their chalice into the mythical well again with the follow-up Wrath of the Titans, Warner Brothers insisted on a few adjustments.

For one, a different director was placed at the helm (Jonathan Liebesman). For another, the lackluster converted 3D of the first was replaced with a much more advanced, effective process.

And interestingly a key member of the cast, the character of Princess (now Queen) Andromeda, was re-cast with classically trained — and classically beautiful — actress Rosamund Pike.

"In Clash (Andromeda) was tied up to be sacrificed to a monster all because of something her mother said, an offending phrase, (and) she had to be rescued," Pike says. "So now she's much different. She's not a victim and refuses to be one."

Already a veteran of U.K. television and trained in the art of the Bard, Pike found Hollywood fame when she was cast as a Bond Girl in 2004's Die Another Die. From there she has maintained a fascinating career that veers between literary works like Barney's Version and muscular pulp fictions like Doom and now Wrath of the Titans.

"Barney's Version was lots of fun. It was such rich material," Pike recalls of the experience making the Canadian drama based on the beloved novel by Mordecai Richler.

"But moving from that to the action world especially in a film like Wrath of the Titans, it's total chaos, it fires all your senses as opposed to your mental and intellectual faculties. You're thrown into a maelstrom and you're trying to run from point A to B. There's sort of a primitive skill that's required."

Club owner wants Drake to pay for pot bust

WORD
Dorothy Robinson
scene@metronews.ca

A rapper smoking weed? Not that surprising. A rapper smoking weed in Oklahoma City? Well, also not that surprising. What else is there to do in Oklahoma City?

Earlier this week,
Drake, the former child star turned loverboy, was reportedly responsible for a huge cloud of pot smoke in a VIP area, which caused the Dollhouse Lounge to close down — even though they opened for the night especially for him, according to TMZ. But here's where the story gets weird: The spot's manager claims that once he and the staff smelled the smoke, they shut the party down.
Then the cops came (apparently to help "restore order") and they discovered a half-burnt joint where Drake and his entourage were previously hanging. So they arrested the club manager — not Drake — and now the manager is mad and wants Drake to help him out with the various tickets that amount to several thousands worth, according to TMZ.

A half smoked joint found in an ashtray causes not only an arrest but also a lawsuit?

"Crime" in Oklahoma City is just adorable. What do club owners expect when they rent out a club to a world-famous rapper and his entourage? A knitting circle?

"And the people I surround myself with don't really talk about this kind of stuff. I heard something, but I didn't pay any attention. It's as simple as being a woman picking a dress you like and having a night and not really thinking about anything else."

Oh, come on Angie! Can't you ever admit when you do something ridiculous?

hung out on the Games set. "We just went to her dad's hotel room and got Gummi Bears and HBO." Lawrence told Us Weekly, Adding that she loves Skittles candies. "We racked up so many charges. Mr. Kravitz was like, 'Did you guys order a lot of room service?!"

Kim's flour bomb

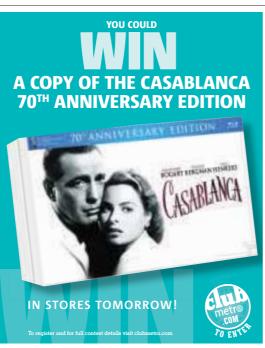

Last Thursday, someone threw a plastic bag of flour at Kim Kardashian on the red carpet, probably not the first time she's been covered in white powder.

Afterwards, the reality TV star said she wouldn't press charges but now tells E! News: "I said earlier no I wasn't. (But) I am just going to think about it, because I don't want someone to think they can really get away with that. I was laughing it off earlier and, you know, I think that is the only thing I knew how to do at the time."

wreck's centennial

Avoiding the 'oh no, grandpa's here' reaction

Grandparents.

'Discipline as normal,' and other great tips for when the folks visit you and the kids

A good friend of mine recently returned home after a month in Australia completely deflated.

It was, she said, a time of dashed expectations, mis-understandings and tension even her three-year-old picked up on.

Not only was she no longer speaking to her parents, but her marriage was strained, the kids had suffered — nobody was left unaffected by the fallout from two households colliding.

A lot of our friends listened to her tale of woe with disbelief, but I found it rather familiar.

A family's baser characteristics only tend to magnify themselves when one of the members moves away, as I did, 10 years ago. Naively, I'd expected our little differences to disappear into all the empty miles between us.

But when quality time together is short, the pressure to make the most of it can cause some major explosions.

Here's some tricks to manage the chaos that surrounds a family visit.

First the practical

• Each relative gets a transport pass, a set of car keys though my parents would never drive in a foreign city), maps and guidebooks.

And we keep a dish with change by the door in case anyone needs it.

• My parents cross five time zones when they visit, so we've experimented with putting our own clocks back an hour or two (at least in spirit) for the first day or two they're here.

It gets everybody moving at a similar pace and helps them feel a bit more normal.

Most grandparents are happy to babysit — even without being asked.

My parents don't fall in that category. So if my husband and have other plans when they're visiting, we reserve a sitter, then ask nicely, once they've settled in.

If they're happy to comply, we cancel the sitter. We also make sure they know they have the freedom to come and go as they wish — especially in the evenings.

• If you need your parents to help out with the children now and then, make sure they have time for a siesta in the late afternoon.

We all need a break during the witching hour.

• Making the long trip to see us is a big deal for our families, so we make sure there's time for a touristy outing: a weekend in the country, a museum visit or a night at the theatre.

Once the practicalities are out of the way

- Write a list (and keep it out of sight) of the things about your visitors that bother you but that you cannot change. Anticipate them and try to avoid them, then if you are confronted, they'll be easier to ignore.
- Blather on all you want about yourself, your children, your job, but don't forget to ask about their lives - theirs are not over
- Stand by your parenting. Discipline as normal. Keep your routines. If your parents want to get involved, they should know they do so at their own peril (I shudder to think how I would have turned out had my mother let her mother control her parenting choices.)

- A special family visit is not the time to air lifelong grievances. When you catch yourself about to scream: "You always do this," or "Can't you just for once..." run to your room and simmer on your own. Even if you slam a door or throw something up there, no-body should mind — as long as you return in good spirits.
- Don't apologize or feel guilty for having moved away from home. Every generation has to adjust to its own unique circumstances and vou've done the best you can.
- Plan the next family visit while your parents are still there — that should give everyone something to look forward to. If you can book your tickets then and there. all the better.

Tips on using less energy in your home.

ELIMINATE STANDBY POWER

- Instead of using your screen saver, set your computer's power management feature to automatically turn off the monitor after a certain period of inactivity.
- Plug any office equipment and infrequently used home electronics into a power bar that can be easily turned off to eliminate standby power.
- Use one power bar to charge all your electronics and switch it off when not in use. Battery chargers draw power even when the device is not plugged in.

SEAL GAPS TO STOP DRAFTS

- Check your home from top to bottom for leaks. Outside air can enter your home through unsealed gaps.
- Seal individual holes like cable or phone lines and along more widespread leaky areas such as baseboards.
- Save on your heating bill with simple home improvements, such as installing insulators behind cover plates.

REDUCE YOUR HOT WATER USE

- Install energy efficient showerheads and faucet aerators (1.5 gallons per minute or less). These small improvements can lower your home's water heating cost and save you money on your energy bill.
- Apply pipe insulation on the hot and cold water lines of your water heater.
- Use cold water for wash and rinse laundry cycles. Make sure to do full loads and hang clothes outside to dry whenever possible.
- Planning a vacation? Turn your water heater to vacation mode.

CHOOSE ENERGY SAVING APPLIANCES

- Cook with the smallest appliance possible, such as a toaster oven in place of an oven.
- An ENERGY STAR® refrigerator will use up to 50 per cent less energy than the average 10 year old refrigerator.
- Run only full loads and use the air dry option on your dishwasher.

USE ENERGY EFFICIENT LIGHTING

- Try using energy efficient light fixtures in every room in your home. They come in a variety of designs, colours and sizes and last at least 10,000 hours.
- ENERGY STAR® qualified torchiere lamps are a safe alternative to halogen torchiere lamps as they give off a fraction of the heat. They can still be dimmed but use much less electricity.
- To get the most out of your Compact Fluorescent Lights (CFLs), use them in rooms where the lights are on for more than 30 minutes, such as the family room, kitchen, hallway or porch.

Woods serves notice ahead of Masters

Golf. Embattled star returns to winning ways on PGA Tour with victory in Orlando Tiger Woods finally brought the buzz back to the very thing that made him famous -

Two weeks after another injury scare, Woods looked as dominant as ever in the red shirt on Sunday to win the Arnold Palmer Invitational at Bay Hill in Orlando.

It was his first PGA Tour victory since a sex scandal at the end of 2009 led to one of the greatest downfalls in sports. Woods closed with 2-under 70 for a five-shot win over Graeme McDowell.

The question two weeks ago was when he could play again. Now, it's whether he can get back to the player who once ruled golf.

Even though he won the Chevron World Challenge last December, this was meaningful for Woods - a full tour event against a strong field.

The final hole was a mere formality, and Woods tapped his putter on the ground waitfor his turn, knowing that his 30 months without a win on the PGA Tour was about to end. He walked off the green with his arm extended, waving his cap to a raucous gallery.

"It does feel good. It feels really good," Woods said before signing his card. "It's been a lot of hard work."

Woods finished at 13-under 275 for his 72nd PGA Tour win, one short of Jack Nicklaus for second place on the career list. But that's not the record Woods wants. He has 14 majors, four short of the Nicklaus standard — now he'll try to end a fouryear drought at the Masters, which starts April 5.

"I am excited, no doubt," Woods said. "I'm looking forward to the momentum I've built here."

It was the first time Woods had all four rounds under par since he returned from his personal crisis at the 2010 Masters.

McDowell made a 45-foot birdie putt and a 50-foot eagle putt early in the round to try to stay close, though he was never closer than two shots after starting with a double bogey He closed with a 74.

Only two weeks ago, Woods was taken off Doral in the final round with tightness in his left Achilles tendon, the same injury that caused him to miss three months and two majors last year. It turned out to be a mild strain, and Sunday was the eighth straight day that Woods played golf — starting with a practice round last Sunday at Augusta. The associated press

- To Dee. I'm vounger. vou're older. I was brought up in a conservative household, you were brought up in a liberal one. I'm time-oriented, and you take your time to make things right. We have so many things not in common... but that's what makes our relationship so special. Thank you for everything and more. Cheers to a bottom-less pitt of memories and love.
- Yes. You already won me, just gotta go get me, but l can get you too. From - Either. because im single, maybe your not? But you want it up to me, im fine with that, don't overthink it, not a bad thing, same thing you did before would be awesome. But it can be up to me, just hope you really let me... From Way u Missed Connection
- this way for me too, but now pretty sure I know why. And when everythings said and done with my life, I can maybe be beside you if you do what you gotta do. From here

BREAKFAST TELEVISION WEATHER SPECIALIST

T Aries | March 21 - April 20.

Try to keep your more caustic comments to yourself or you'll spend the next few days apologizing. Taurus | April 21 - May 21.

Somewhere along the line you have made an embarrassing, and maybe costly, mistake but vou must not let it affect your confidence.

I Gemini | May 22 - June 20.

You just know that someone is keeping something from you and it's using you a fair bit of anguish.

Gancer | June 21 - July 22.

You may find it harder than usual to express yourself today but that's bably no bad thing

Leo | July 23 - Aug. 22. Why are you finding it hard to be cheerful when so many things are going your

W Virgo | Aug. 23 - Sept. 22. You really don't care what other people think but even so it might be wise to listen to their criticisms

△ Libra | Sept. 23 - Oct. 22. The best way to deal with someone who is giving you a hard time today is not to give them a hard time in return to be nice to them Scorpio | Oct. 23 - Nov. 21. Make sure you have got your facts right before wading in with an opinion 7 Sagittarius | Nov. 22 -

Dec. 21. Take care not to fall out with someone you usually get along with quite well over what is really a vial matter.

Capricorn | Dec. 22 - Jan

20. You may be impatient to get started on something you have been planning for ages.

🏎 Aquarius | Jan. 21 - Feb

18. This is a good day for thinking but maybe not such a good day for y pursuing your ambitions.

H Pisces | Feb. 19 - March 20.

Mercury in your sign is at odds with Saturn, which suggests you may not be thinking straight over the next 24 hours. Fortunately, Pisces is a sign that relies more on intuition - and your instincts are perfect as usual.
